Upon the self same strains,
While sounds of crime and fear and desolation,
Come back again in sad refrains.

on through the world we go, an army marching,
With listening ears. With listening ears,
Each longing, sighting for the heavenly music
He never hears;
Each longing, sighing for a word of comfort,
A word of tender praise,
A word of love, to cheer the endless journey
Of earth's hard, busy days.

They love us, and we know it; this suffices For reason's share. Why should they pause to give that love expres sion

With gentle care?
Why should they pause? But still our hearts are aching
With all the gnawing pain
Of hungry love that longs to hear the music,
And longs and longs in vaiu. We love them, and we know it; if we falter,

We love them, and we know it; if we faller,
With fingers mush,
Among the unused strings of love's expression,
The notes are dumb.
We shrink within ourselves, in voiceless sorrow,
Leaving the words unsaid,
And, side by side with those we love the dearest,
In silence on we tread.

Thus on we tread, and thus each in silence Its fate fulfills. Waiting and hoping for the heavenly music Beyond the distant hills. The only difference of the love in heaven From love on earth below,

Is: Here we love and know not how to tell it, And there we all shall know.

GIANT JACK.

It was in the year 1860, while I was staying a few days in a Missouri village. that I first saw Giant Jack. I was scated on the piazza of the only hotel that the place could boast of, when I saw a large, andsome man, accompanied by a very pretty woman, passing down the street. He was over six feet in height, with broad shoulders, a deep, full chest, muscular and well formed limbs, glossy, chestnut hair, and a huge beard of the same color, which hung nearly to his waist. He was about 35 years of age. and his companion appeared to be about twelve years his junior. They were seated in a handsome carriage, drawn by a pair of beautiful, blooded horses; and it was evident that they belonged to a

BOSTON BARS BANISHED.

The Hub's Drinkers Will New Have to Quench Their Thirst at Beer tardens. Boston, April 80.—The board of police of Boston has stirred up the liquor-dealers by ordering the removal of all public bers, and gave them twenty days in which to comply with the order. This order affects all the big hotels, as well as the ordinary groggeries, and already there is music in the air. Refusal to comply with the order will refusal to comply with the order will result in a forf-iture of the license. The law which the board of police is now enforcing, has been on the statute book several years, but it has always been a dead letter. No effort has ever been made to enforce it. The Prohibitionists have been pulling a few wires this made to enforce it. The Prohibitionists have been politing a few wires this winter, and have made so much talk about the non-enforcement of the law that the board of police have determined to put the law to the test.

The liquor interests, alarmed at the agitation of this question, introduced an order relative to be galizing sales of liquor over a bar, but the committee on the liquor law reported adversely upon it, and the report was sustained in both branches after a hard fight.
